LIFE

हमेशा याद आएंगे

What is life?
I asked myself one day
Life is a melange of sadness and joy
That's what my heart lead me to say.

It flows through us
We flow through it
Each one complimenting the other
As seems fit.

Life is in the blossoming fields,
The chirping song thrush,
The wilderness and the fauna
Slow and steady, there is no rush.

Without life, the Earth will fade
Come rain, hail or snow.
There will be no energy and no shade,
And the world will cease to exist.

Because life itself is existence
It revives and rejuvenates
And in our souls and hearts
The song of life resonates.

Tired.

Weary of this lingering ache, weary of the years,
Trying to vanquish pain without shedding any tears.

And as a poet with broken wings and a shattered
heart,
Instead of writing poetry, I write my fears.

क्या आप भी भूल जाएंगे?

पता नहीं, समय इतनी जल्दी कैसे बीत गया।
आए तो रोते हुए थे — “नहीं जाना, नहीं जाना स्कूल!”
अब जाएंगे रोते हुए — “नहीं जाना, नहीं जाना स्कूल से!”

पता नहीं कब ये शिक्षक अपने से लगने लगे,
पता नहीं था इतना यादगार बन जाएगा यह पल।

समय अब खत्म होने को है,
कक्षाएँ समाप्त हो जायेंगी, किताबें भी बदल जाएंगी।
क्या फिर हम ऐसे साथ बैठ पाएंगे?
क्या फिर एक-दूसरे की शिकायतें कर पाएंगे?
क्या फिर क्लास में छिप-छिप कर खाना खा पाएंगे?

क्या सब एक-दूसरे को भूल जाएंगे?
क्या सबके लिए ये पल उतना ही यादगार होंगे?
क्या सब भी इन पलों को उसी अपनापन से याद करेंगे?

ये अवसर वापस तो नहीं मिल जाएगा,
तो सारी बदमाशी निकाल कर ही जाएंगे।

कितने भी बड़े हो जाएंगे
पर इन्हें... इन्हें कभी न भूल पाएंगे
यह हंसी, यह बातें, यह छोटी-छोटी यादें
सब याद आएंगी

इन्हें कैसे भूल जाएंगे...?

Whispers of Winter

The cold breezes enter veiling the fields,
with it's chiseled breath, the nature reveals.
The snowflakes rolling down the skies,
Singing the melodies of skadi, that none defies

Each breath emerges as a cloud of dreams,
Lingering in the air, with fading dreams,
sharing it's serenity with the trees,
and later vanishes for the sun to unleash.

I hear a Robin shouting the Tsip,
to trace the others amidst the trip,
Through frozen lakes under the haze,
Till their destination deep in the maze.

The pine stands tall between the snowflakes,
With it's roots unshaken, though the whole world shakes,
Dashing through the icy gales and skies
growing pale,
It guards the woods where dreams prevail.

The aurora breaks through silvery haze,
Reviving the hearts, the gelid breaks,
The world exhales the final sigh,
As winter bows the final goodbye.

The Chrysalis of Ego

When we look at a butterfly's lifecycle, i.e. metamorphosis, we notice that the caterpillar must endure a cocoon stage in order to emerge as a beautiful butterfly. The cocoon stage is ugly yet important for the next one and is the most crucial part of the small caterpillar's journey. The human ego goes through the same journey. A person will become egoistic as a byproduct of their personal development.

Imagine a person that is currently a nobody, just about average in everything. When that person starts to develop themselves and start to advance in life and become better than they were before, we'll observe that the person will become egoistic as a result of their development. It isn't that the person was like that by nature, but in their journey from insignificance to someone significant, humble and respectable in their area of work and life.

Thus, ego can be defined as the transitional period from insignificance to humility.

The Chrysalis of Ego- ego is the cocoon stage before emerging as a wiser, humbler being. Each and every personality has gone through an egoistic stage, and it is necessary and compulsory in order to move forward in life and build character. Only after the egoistic stage can the person truly become humble and someone actually significant and experience growth on a level they never experienced before. A person in pursuit of something must become the opposite first. In this case a person who seeks humility must become the opposite, that is egoistic to truly realise the dangers that a person's ego brings. Only then can he understand what humility truly is in every sense of the word and become someone who will be remembered and appreciated by those around him.

So, we can conclude from the chrysalis of ego that ego is the transitional period from insignificance to humility, and the person must become egoistic first to truly understand what it means to be humble.
